“The key to a better life is a good education, and my goal is to ensure that schools have the tools and counsel necessary to provide the best education to their students.”

Ashton earned her law degree from UNT Dallas College of Law. While attending law school, she served as the Acquisitions Editor for the On the Cusp Law Review. Additionally, she was involved as a student attorney in the Joyce Ann Brown Innocence Clinic.

Prior to law school, Ashton attended Texas A&M University where she earned a Bachelor’s degree in Agribusiness, minored in Agricultural Economics, and earned a Certificate in International Trade.

Ashton Makarwich focuses her legal practice on facilities and business as well as general education.
