“Growing up I saw good people striving to make every detail of school districts work, every day. I wanted to help.”

Jameson Baker comes from a family of excellent educators, which provided him a personal understanding of the issues faced by school districts.

In his legal practice, Jameson focuses on representing school Districts all over the state of Texas with an emphasis on employment, open government, student law, general school law, and litigation. He advises superintendents and other school administrators on the handling of personnel matters from assistance with appropriate documentation to possible employment action, and more. Jameson frequently attends board meetings to advise Districts on a variety of legal matters. He also works directly with Board’s to conduct superintendent searches.

Jameson is a frequent speaker at regional and state-wide school law conferences and routinely provides in-services at school Districts in the areas of investigations, documentation, and grievances.
