"I'm passionate about helping our clients find solutions to their legal problems because they hold the most important job - educating the next generation."

Lindy French focuses her legal practice primarily on special education.

Lindy earned her law degree at Southern Methodist University. While attending law school she was a staff editor for the International Law Review Association. Additionally, she was involved in the Association for Public Interest Law and as a student attorney in the Van Sickle Family Law Clinic.

Prior to law school, Lindy served as the Coordinator of Special Projects at Baylor University. Her experience working for Baylor led her to pursue a career in School Law. Lindy attended Baylor University for undergraduate studies. She earned a Bachelor's degree in International Studies and minored in Spanish.
