“The education of our youth is immeasurably important, and public education should ensure access and opportunities for all young people. I am happy to serve those whose passion is uplifting the next generation.”

Demi Williams represents public schools and entities in all facets of litigation. A skilled trial attorney, she has tried more than 20 cases in state and federal court.

Demi served as an assistant district attorney in San Francisco and has successfully tried immigration defense matters in both Texas and California. Prior to becoming a prosecutor, Demi's practice areas included complex commercial litigation, white-collar criminal defense, and federal government investigations.

Growing up in Arlington, Texas, Demi attended public school until college. She returned to a public institution for her legal education, graduating from the University of California, Berkeley, School of Law.
