“Schools are where we transmit central tenets to the next generation. We can’t shy away from the difficult issues — we simply must untangle them.”

Stacy Tuer Castillo has been practicing law since 1996. She represents school districts in all areas of school law, including First Amendment, civil rights, and other constitutional issues, employment, and litigation. She has successfully represented school districts in federal and state court litigation, appellate matters, and administrative proceedings. She has handled all facets of litigation, including pre-trial, bench and jury trials, and appeals, and the litigation matters included construction, contract disputes, employment, special education, civil rights, and student matters. She has also represented school districts in construction contracts, real estate transactions, and a variety of matters related to Facilities and Business.

Stacy is a proud product of Texas public schools and is honored to work alongside educators, administrators, and school districts in navigating school law so they can effectively serve our children.

During law school, Stacy was a judicial intern for Justice Raul Gonzalez of the Texas Supreme Court. Following graduation from law school, she worked as a briefing attorney to Justice Paul Green at the Fourth Court of Appeals in San Antonio. She has authored several articles and has been a speaker on such topics as religion in schools, Constitutional issues, bonds and construction law, sexual harassment, the Public Information Act, Open Meetings Act, and school employment issues.
